Books in Japan have a long history, which begins in the late 8th century AD. The majority of books were hand-copied until the Edo period, when woodblock printing became comparatively affordable and widespread. Movable-type printing had been used from the late 16th century, but for various aesthetic and practical reasons woodblock printing and hand-copied remained dominant until much later. Japanese equivalents for "book" include 本 and 書籍. The former term indicates only bound books, and ...
